DAYLIGHT BURGLARS PLUNDERED AT WILL.

Carried Away Property Worth $200 From the Home of Mrs. Mary Flachmeier.

DROVE BOY FROM THE HOUSE.

One Man Arrested on Information Furnished by the Lad, and Police Assert That They Will Catch Other Suspects.

Daring daylight burglars entered the residence of Mrs. Mary Flachmeler at No. 1109 North Twelfth street Friday morning and carried away property to the value of $200. While they were at work one of the children returned to the house. They drove him away and barred him out of the house while they continued their looting.

Robert Jasper, a suspect, is locked up at the Fourth District Police Station on a warrant charging grand larceny.

Shortly after 8 o'clock Friday morning three men, clad in rough attire, entered the house by forcing a rear window and then house by forcing a rear window and then proceeded to loot the house at will. Trunks were broken open, closets ransacked and everything turned topsy-turvy.

While they were engaged in the robbery Frank Heimich, a 10-year-old grandson of Mrs. Flachmeier, returned from play and walked into the kitchen through the rear door, which had been unlocked by the robbers. Frank knew that the house had been locked by his mother, who went away an hour earlier and he started through the house to see what was wrong. When Mrs. Flachmeier returned an hour afterwards she took an inventory of her horsehold goods. A sliver watch, a revolver, which had been bought to guard the place; a gold pin and a purse containing $5 had been stolen.

Frank Helmich told his grandmother that he knew one of the men. On his information Pollecman Blocher of the Fourth District arrested Robert Jasper early yesterday morning. Frank identified him, and a warrant was issued against him yesterday morning. Jasper declares that he is innocent of the charge. The police say they will have two other suspects within a few days.

33 YEARS AT ONE STAND

Says That He Thought Articles Would Not Be Missed From Store-His Home Is in Silver Springs, Ark.

Reeder Henderson, a young Sunday-school teacher and church worker, is locked up at the Four Courts on a warrant charging him with pilfering from the John L. Boland Book and Stationery Company, where he was employed.

erson admits his thefts, and a part of the stolen property has been recovered. A warrant charging petit larceny was ised against him yesterday morning. He sued against him yesterday morning. He says he is a member of First Congregational Church, where he treaches a Sunday-school class. He says he is also a member of the Young Men's Christian Association, in which he is an active worker.

Henderson is 22 years old and quite an intelligent young man. They was a head of the control of the intelligent young man. Two years ago he came to St. Louis from Silver Springs, Ark.

came to St. Louis from Silver Springs, Ark. He transferred his church membership to this place, and joined the Y. M. C. A. At first he went to work for the Majestic Range Company, but left there to accept a position with the Boland Book and Stationery Company, where he has remained since. He did well, and was promoted for his efficient services.

Some time ago the concern began to miss numerous books, fancy articles and miscellany. A watch was set, and suspicion was directed toward Henderson. He was arrested Friday afternoon. A scarch of his room at No. 822 Lucas avenue brought forth numerous articles, which were identified by the company. When confronted with the evidence, he broke down and confessed. Henderson said there was no love affair, no woman in the case. He said he simply took a few little things of little value, thinking they would not be missed and no harm would be done.

NOT AFRAID OF KIDNAPERS.

Wagenman Says if They Can Take His Son They Can Have Him.

Al J. Wagenman, Clerk of the Court of Criminal Correction, received a letter yes-terday in which the writer threatened to kidnap Wagenman's son if $5,000 were not placed in a designated spot this evening. Mr. Wagenman notified the police, although he is of the opinion that the letter is a hoax. It reads:

Mr. Wagenman notined the ponce, attough he is of the opinion that the letter is a hoax. It reads:

"St. Louis. February 1, 1901.—Al Wagaman: Dear Sir—I take this means of letting you know if you do not place $5,000 under the board walk on McPherson avenue, between Euclid and Aubert avenue, by 10 p. m., Sunday, I will, with my confederates, take your son, and you will never know what became of him. I will place a green light on walk, so you will know where to place it. Remember what I have told you. Do not say you have not got the money, as you have. From,

"JERRY BLAIN AND GANG.

"Do not follow us as we will have men watching you."

At the end of the letter, under a crude skull and crossbones is written the Latin phrase, "In hoc signo vinces." The letter is written with lead pencil in a hand scarcely legible. It was mailed in the second circuit, at 7 p. m., Friday.

When it came Mr. Wagenman treated it as a joke, but on the advice of his clerks he reported it to the police. A watch will be kept on Mr. Wagenman's house, at No. 5137 Morgan street. Eugene Wagenman, the son mentioned in the letter, is 50 years old and quite an athlete. His father said yesterday it would require more than two men to hold him, and any one who could capture him was welcome to him.

ALL DISCUSSION IS OF TWO MONARCHS.

London Talks of Nothing Save the Death of the Queen and Accession of King.

EDWARD VII IS VERY POPULAR.

His Long Preparation for His New Position-Gossip as to Probable Action by Parliament on a New Civil List.

BY HERBERT W. PAUL SPECIAL BY CABLE.

London, Feb. 2-(Copyright, 1901, by the New York Herald Company.)-The old Queen and the new King continue to fill the newspapers with anecdotes, gossip and speculation

There can be no doubt that the was weighed heavily upon the Queen's mind, and that the sorrow which she felt at the

and that the sorrow which she felt at the loss of so many gallant soldiers contributed to her death.

But that she disapproved of her Ministers' policy, or that the King disapproves of it, there is no evidence of any kind. Both have always been strict constitutionalists, maintaining a rigid silence in puble upon all controversial questions.

The Queen's funeral promises to surpass in magnificence all previous ceremonies of the kind. Perhaps the most impressive part of it was the solemn conveyance of the body across the Solent between double lines of battleships; but the procession through the streets of London far exceeded in splendor the funeral march of the great in spiendor the funeral march of the great Duke of St. Paul's, with which alone it can be compared, and the scene in St. George's Chapel, Windsor, with the robed Knights of the Garter under their banners in their stalls, could hardly be reproduced elsewhere.

The English people, great as was their reverence for the Queen, have been surprised to find what an authoritative position she held, even in the councils of foreign sovereigns.

They have been deeply impressed with They have been deeply impressed with the devoted solicitude of the German Emperor, who scarcely left his grandmother's room from the time of his arrival at Osborne till her death, but what. I think, has touched them most is the revelations made in the speeches of Lord Salisbury and Mr. Balfour.

Victoria Had No Holiday.

That the Queen never gave herself a holiday in sixty-three years of unremitting attention to public duty, from the age of 18 to the age of 81, is probably without parallel in the history of the world.

The Queen was blessed with a strong constitution, perfect health and nerves of steel, but she had many sorrows, including the heaviest which can befall a woman.

Her anxiety must often have been extreme, yet, though after her husband's death, she withdrew almost entirely from the pleasures of the world, she never allowed anything to interfere with the due discharge of her royal functions.

Her ministers found her a constant propand stay in all the difficulties and dangers of public life.

They also, as both Lord Salisbury and Lord Kimberley could testify, found, her a true friend and comforter in private aftrue friend and comforter in private affiction.

The King's speech at the first Council nade an excellent impression on all who heard it, and it was an auspicious beginning for his reign.

Though obviously suffering from deep emotion and impressed as he could not help being by the magnitude of his responsibilities, his words, uttered without reference to notes, were simple, manly and dignified. They came from the heart and from the head.

But, of course, there is not the same excitement about his accession as there has been when similar events have occurred in the past. His Majesty is in his sixtleth year, and scarcely any Prince of Wales before him has been either so popular or so well known.

Contrasts Between Kings.

William IV was 55 when he succeeded his brother, but, as may be read in the Greville Memoirs, his dazzling elevation turned his head. For months after he became King the principal topic in frivolous circles was his latest indiscretion, which was sure not to be his last.

George IV had been ten years regent before he reigned, and though he had been rather a popular favorite as Prince of Wales, his regency made him, as generally as justly detested.

The King has always performed his social engagements with genial tact. He has shown real interest in schemes for philanthropic improvements and has long been preparing himself for his new position.

The first question which the Government will have to decide is what civil list they should propose to Parliament, or, rather, to the House of Commons. This is urgent because the civil list of 1837 expired with the death of the Queen, and the Cabinet has to determine whether it will ask the House for a larger sum or for the same. A smaller one is considered impossible.

The Queen Consort must, according to custom, have a separate establishment, with sairled officers for her bousehold.

But old Parliamentary hands feel strongly that, while the list without an increase might be passed with little trouble and no serious resistance, except from the Irith, any ad
